Tim Myers : Snuffed Out (Candlemaking Mysteries, No. 2) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Snuffed Out (Candlemaking Mysteries, No. 2):

get the second book in the series. I've also read the Lighthouse series by Tim Myers. Myers way of writing is so natural, the books are like visits with friends. The characters are realistic, full of individuality and likeable. I bought Snuffed Out as soon as I finished the first book. I loved it! I did not think I would like the candle making aspect of the books but it is interesting as well. Mrs. Jorgenson is one of my favorite characters. I am now determined to read all the books in this wonderful series. And, if Mr. Myers has written any other series, I will be looking to read them as well!

I've enjoyed both of Tim Myers's candle shop mysteries--AT WICK'S END and SNUFFED OUT--because the series is crafted as the perfect cozy. The main character/sleuth, Harrison Black, has inherited a candle shop as well as the building his and several other cozy shops (antique store, coffee shop/bakery, pottery shop, New Age shop) occupy. This gives the books a closed community of characters, and with Harrison living upstairs in an apartment over the candle shop, gives the readers a place they'll want to come back to again and again. One of the reasons I and many other mystery readers love cozies is that we do get to live the main character's life vicariously, and how comfortable it is to return to Harrison's comfy building to hang out with his friends, learn new ways to make candles, and, oh yes, track down a murderer now and then.

We're back in Micah's Ridge with Harrison and his band of fellow shop owners. Harrison stumbles over the dead body of one of his tenants, and finds out the clues don't make sense for an accidental death. Enter the dead man's ex-wife and trouble ensues. The mystery was less intriguing than the characters in this one. There were few clues and it just seemed to be over, but half the fun of a cozy is settling in to enjoy the sleuth and his environs, and this book does not fail in that aspect. Still an enjoyable read.

When the power goes out in Harrison Black's candle shop, he finds his tenant electrocuted. Now Harrison will burn the candle at both ends to catch a killer as the tenant's death starts to look shockingly like murder.
